The vacation and travel industry has seen substantial amount of growth in that sector due to online travel platforms and digital booking systems. Everyone uses websites and applications to compare prices, explore destinations and book their dream travel packages. Platforms like these make vacation planning a lot easier by allowing users to do tasks such as organise flights, accommodation and activities in one place.

Online travel agencies such as Booking.com and Jet2holidays give users the ability to search for flights, hotels and vacation packages. These platforms make planning process simple by offering package deals, customer reviews and filtering systems based on budget, destination and travel dates [1], [2]. Travel agencies advertise and manage their magnitude of packages for users to see, allowing customers to compare multiple options quickly and efficiently.

Price comparison platforms play an instrumental role for travellers trying to find affordable options. Tripadvisor allows users to compare hotels, restaurants and attractions while also viewing ratings and reviews from other travellers. On the other hand, Skyscanner focuses on flight price comparisons across airlines and travel providers. These systems improve price transparency and ensure that users make better financial decisions when it comes to planning trips [3], [4].

Accommodation providers are another essential part of the tourism industry. Airbnb allows property owners (1st type of user) to rent out their house, apartment or room. This gives travellers (2nd type of user) more flexible and affordable accommodations as they aren't stuck on just hotels anymore but a way vaster selection. Features such as location maps, customer reviews and secure online payments have made these platforms very popular among modern travellers [5].

Tourist attraction and destination platforms inform users on the vast information about regions they want to explore. GetYourGuide is an example where they provide bookings for tours, sightseeing activities and tourist experiences for all countries. Another popular platform is Lonely Planet, who provides destination guides, travel articles and recommendations about popular attractions and cultures around the world. These platforms encourage tourism by informing travellers on the best way to enjoy their holiday and plan memorable experiences [6], [7].

Overall, the travel industry relies heavily on online platforms to improve convenience, accessibility and transparency for travellers. The Tripistry system aims to combine many of these features into one platform where travellers can compare packages and agencies can manage and advertise their services efficiently.
